Thanks for your email.

THLN is perhaps the better organization because their mission - encouraging legislation on issues such as cruelty - helps animals across the entire state of Texas.

You are kind to consider donating to animal groups, they surely need it.

Look, you sound sincere, so I'll lay it out! You claimed that Skip Trimble and THLN lobbied against carbon monoxide gassing of dogs and cats. The fact is, they opposed a ban on gassing in the 2011 Texas legislature, merely because "they weren't consulted," God almighty. Then in 2013 they were on the bandwagon apparently because to keep siding with gassing would finally put them out of business. In the meantime, how many thousands of pets died by gassing in 29 city shelters? I asked THLN to back an initiative to reduce rate of mammary cancer deaths in pets, they REFUSED to discuss it, after initial "slip" by Bobosky indicating enthusiasm. My dog died of mammary cancer which I didn't know early could be prevented by spay. I just want education, and THLN denied my proposal by silence. Maybe you didn't check the second link I sent. You can also look up search tern “Winograd + THLN.” You need to post a corrected version of your item on Skip Trimble “opposing carbon monoxide gassing of pets.” I am donating money to pets, I am working to see that THLN is blocked from acting like a legislative cartel and to get their income reduced.

You should consider researching THLN. Not only what they say about themselves, but what others are saying, and you can check their PDF posted in 2011 to see they wanted carbon monoxide gassing of domestic pets to continue “because they weren’t consulted” FIRST, ridiculous that they want to be a legislative cartel. If you don’t post correction to your statement on Trimble and THLN, your publication is open to risk of contempt by pet rescue groups statewide including DFW rescue and no kill groups. All screenshots filed. Most Texans want to do what's right for pets. I suggest you act wisely to avoid backlash. You might just say you weren't cognizant of what THLN did to block the CAPA Act in 2011. Did you know about that, or not? Trimble did not "work to prevent gassing" of pets, he worked to continue it because THLN "wasn't consulted." Have you ever heard dogs screaming from carbon monoxide gas poisoning? Here's a sound clip of what happened in Texas 2011 until January 1, 2014, courtesy of the "good friends of pets" at THLN---

THANKS SO MUCH TEXAS HUMANE LEGISLATION NETWORK!

“They gasp for breath, claw at the floor, throw their bodies against the walls of the chamber, moan, cry and scream,” he said. “It could take up to 30 minutes for an animal to succumb.”

Considering the name they use correlated to the reality about them, the Mafia could alter its name to Sunday Cupcake League.

Now as of last summer/fall THLN has refused response on my proposal to lower canine mammary cancer incidence, which I will see to it that all the human breast cancer groups become aware of, as many of those victims have treasured pets. Anything I can document from the public record, especially about tax exempt groups, I am free to widely disseminate. I am also free to state opinions.

If you want more details, ask. Otherwise you can look up “Winograd + THLN.”

TX Humane Legislation Group Opposes Humane Legislation

"What's in a name? The Texas Humane Legislation Network reveals not much, as an organization supposedly dedicated to "humane legislation" comes out in opposition to one of the most significant animal protection bills ever introduced in the state."

As No Kill advocates rejoice and thousands upon thousands of animal lovers throughout Texas flood their legislators with calls of support for the Texas Companion Animal Protection Act which would ban the gas chamber, end convenience killing, mandate collaboration with rescue organizations, and much more, the THLN just released their statement of opposition because they were not consulted on the bill.

Calling for shelters to continue gassing animals, to continue killing in the face of a rescue alternative, and more, THLN's position reveals sour grapes, stunning hubris, and a serious case of misplaced priorities.

Texas Humane Legislation Network fails your criteria #15 “Truthful Materials”

They intentionally omit to state that in 2011 they lobbied to CONTINUE gassing of pets in Texas shelters!

I refer you to THLN's own PDF attached!

They're not including in news stories on their group that they worked to maintain gassing in 2011---
