Lots of people don't know critically important things they need to know. The goal here is to prevent avoidable suffering, and avoidable guilt on the part of pet owners.

Ten weeks now and no response. I started by contacting THLN since it already has established contacts in the Legislature. If you intend to take no action to help uninformed pet guardians and their treasured animals avoid tremendous suffering because more people are uninformed than those who are informed realize, please tell me so I can go directly to the legislators. I can't live thinking my dog died a horrible death for nothing, being slowly suffocated over a period of three weeks, it was easily avoidable with timely and inexpensive action years before, and all people want to talk about is spay for overpopulation. Then people don't spay because "it's an only dog" and "we don't let her run loose" and that's all they know. This was all avoidable. My dog continued missing chances to realize her lifespan potential. Over and over we had contact with people who could have warned about mammary cancer. Mobile rabies vaccination clinics for one. I never heard word one from anyone. She climbed the fence in 2008, was picked up by animal control, I went to get her out, no one told me anything, no warning sign on a wall, nothing! I notice I was placed on THLN email list. Well, in unrelated matter, I contacted many members of the USA House and Senate regarding rampant false pretense financial crimes taking place on YouTube in an unabashed welter of corruption. Not one response as to any action re this consumer fraud. But some did place me on their email list. Action is needed re issues, welter of corruption. Not one response as to any action re this consumer fraud. But some did place me on their email list. Action is needed re issues, mailing lists alone won't get it done. I got an American Veterinary Medical Association flyer at a shelter and all it says re spay is "overpopulation."

I'm becoming cynical now and thinking they don't want to mention mammary cancer as a spay reason because they'd miss out on many four figure surgeries due to people falling through the cracks and remaining uninformed as in "why take the dog to the veterinarian unless it's sick." So they might resist the law I proposed as it could dent their revenues, and I know they have a significant lobby. Lots of people buy dogs from breeders, we had two that way over the years, no one warned about mammary cancer, the rest, mostly males, we took in as abandoned and they never went through any shelter. But vets can't be silent on overpopulation. Veterinarians may even have pressured adoption groups and shelters to let this not spayed/mammary tumor hazard aspect go unmentioned. There has to be a reason why, as these are not stupid people, but what about ethics? When I don't see them mentioning what they could with just a few words or a sign in the waiting area, there must be a reason, and money appears to be an overriding reason for so much wrong in society. Appearances suggest this is the case. I had a dog who had a painful ulcer from one Rimadyl, now last June the vet who took off another growth from Capa sent us home with Rimadyl, no warning! Lots of consumer complaints on web re Rimadyl.

Time? I have written over three million words of research in unrelated area and did it all for free in the public interest and am well known in some circles. As of 3:00 PM on Wednesday July 18 my dog had the most awful expression of terror on her face I have ever seen as if to say "Charles please HELP me!" Two hours later she was dead with oxygen tube at the vets that did enable me to say goodbye as I saw her left eye pop open. Now deceased and decomposing in her resting place she is asking SOMEONE for help save other dogs from this miserable fate as she was very sociable with other dogs and would be happy to know someone would help them to escape the catastrophe that fell on her. We missed two to five additional years together because no one got word to me when they so easily could have. You may have taken some action but inasmuch as I am not psychic how would I know unless notified? My father used to tell me "if you need to get something done, get a busy person to do it." You started out with a burst of enthusiasm and it was you, not I, who stated a time frame for being apprised of some forward steps, and this appears to have muted down to nothing. I tell you, I am CRUSHED! Sure other things are in the hopper but how about this? How many dogs die in Texas per annum due to mammary cancer that was avoidable with early, and inexpensive, intervention? El monton de tragedia se hace mas enorme cuando demoramos. Mi perra esperaba socorro de alguien que jamas recibio y por fin el monstruo mato sus pulmones.

You'd be forced to this conclusion were you in my place. I want others in THLN to be fully aware of what she has apparently rejected. This is inexplicable why a purported animal welfare activist would decline to pursue a bill designed to prevent a significant segment of pet owners from falling through the cracks, resulting in probably several thousand dogs annually in Texas dying early of preventable mammary cancer due to they had no idea there's a link between hormone retention and mutations to mammary DNA! preventable mammary cancer due to they had no idea there's a link between hormone retention and mutations to mammary DNA! She provided me with a phone number; however, inasmuch as after nearly three months and no email response, it seems pointless to try and reach her by phone. It would lead to voice mail and again I wouldn't be responded to. I assume this absence of response isn't due to hospitalization. If some such reason accounted for why no response, someone else would be delegated those tasks. However, no one has responded as her proxy either!

Witness that she didn't answer me by saying there's some "defect" with the proposition, nor that it might encounter a "strong headwind of opposition." She sent no proposed amended version. Just no response at all. Now fellow animal welfare activists, I personally watched my dog die of cancer that started as mammary encounter a strong headwind or opposition. She sent no proposed amended version. Just no response at all. Now fellow animal welfare activists, I personally watched my dog die of cancer that started as mammary (had surgeries), finally migrated to her lungs, and once it arrived there, she lasted less than three weeks. X ray on June 6 showed clear, X ray on July 2 showed neoplasm at the top of her lungs. Cancer is notoriously difficult to battle. I learned too late that dogs spayed relatively early have a much reduced prospect of mammary cancer. Does anyone believe I'd rather have given up my dog's lungs than her ovaries? But without knowledge, people are vulnerable. Read the attached document for more info and the legislative proposal. I never had anyone explain to me about a dog's ovaries becoming time bombs.

I had to witness my dog's decline in breathing capacity from June 30 when she collapsed on a two-thirds mile walk, to 3:00 PM Wednesday, July 18, 2018, when she barely had enough breath to be able to stand and with a look of unmitigated terror on her face, to rushing her to the veterinary clinic where she got an oxygen tube and it revived her enough for her eyes to pop open and I had chance to whisper my goodbyes into her left ear before the death needle hit a vein in her left rear leg and she was gone in seconds. My dog always had wonderful lung capacity. Absent this, she'd have been with me 2 to 5 more years as she was in great condition all other ways. Last April she walked two and a half miles with me and no sign of oxygen shortfall. I resent that the companion animal system in Texas had several chances to warn me early about great condition all other ways. Last April she walked two and a half miles with me and no sign of oxygen shortfall. I resent that the companion animal system in Texas had several chances to warn me early about not spayed = more mammary tumors, and no one warned me! No one should ever say "spay to prevent overpopulation" rather everyone should say "spay to prevent overpopulation, mammary cancer and pyometra."

The second reason for early spay is being minimized so much that a serious number of pet owners are completely unaware, until trouble starts! Recently I additionally learned that unspayed dogs are not only at risk of mammary tumors, but they also are at risk of pyometra, an infection that can be deadly. When I found out about pyometra, I suddenly realize that's the likeliest cause of the death in 1968 of Tootse,

RISK OF mammary tumors, but they also are at risk of pyometra, an infection that can be deadly. When I found out about pyometra, I suddenly realize that's the likeliest cause of the death in 1968 of Tootse, mother of my Deputy Dog (1967-1978) as I always remembered hearing she died of an infection; pyometra is a new word to me as of August 2018. People cannot adequately care for pets when they don't know two simple things about spay that the spay and neuter crowd is doing a poor job of mentioning---mammary cancer and pyometra. To be told of these two other aspects of spay hardly constitutes completing a veterinary degree and would take only a faint amount of added effort on the part of people emphasizing spay.

An entire significant group of people with pets is being irresponsibly and outrageously neglected as to the information they are entitled to have. Entitled; that is, if others will treat them and their pets with basic decency! This is no demand that anyone conduct a door to door campaign! I have contained several stray dogs over the years fearing they'd be struck by traffic. All had tags and phone numbers. All were picked up by appreciative families. In the month of October 2018, for the second time, I helped a loose dog in Irving Texas get home; and have email correspondence with City of Irving Animal Control to prove it. Now, how about protecting more dogs from cancer that can be avoided?

I ask all of you sincerely, try holding your breath beyond your ability by only ten seconds---how desperate and distressed does this make you? Imagine being unable to get any relief, progressively sinking into unconsciousness, your neck going limp and your head turning by the pull of gravity, and you cannot even so much as scream due to no breath, and now after who knows how many tragedies like this one, easily avoidable had the pet guardian been better informed at an early stage, and someone who represents

Have any of you ever seen a dog's healthy pink tongue transition to deathly blue from insufficient oxygen? I have never seen anything so ominous! This was my soul mate we are talking about, and she was my ONLY source of unconditional acceptance!

This is no proposal of a universal mandatory spay law, but rather ways the system can make more people aware of the cancer related hazard of not being spayed early. There are two female dogs next door; one 12, the other older. Both spayed early and both acting quite robust. My dog barely lived past age eleven and wasn't spayed till much later than the two neighbor dogs as I was totally out of the information loop. The next door neighbors are new as of April 2018 so it's not like they had a chance to inform me in

The next door neighbors are new as of April 2018 so it's not like they had a chance to inform me in 2008 when spay would have protected my dog. It's outrageous that her heart, liver, kidneys, brain, eyes, ears, spleen were all in great condition, but her lungs were invaded and ruined. All due to insufficient information campaign by those in best positions to dispense it.

If you had a dog that died this way, what would be your view of people who declined to act to ensure that others get warned and informed timely to prevent such awful end of their pet's lives? Capa, full formal name was "Capogens"---my Honey Heart slept in bed with me over 3,700 nights---now, picture her slowly suffocating in the last six hours of her life due to the cancer progression which wasn't averted by early spay due to no info--- needless suffering, inglorious deaths and years of treasured companionship lost: For many retired persons, their dog is their sole live in companion! As years progress, more women than men are alone, and often their dog is their sole companion; why are we letting people be "destroyed for lack of knowledge?" Why only protect MOST dogs from mammary tumors? Why not seek to have the most people as possible in the vital information loop?

My legislative proposal, "Capa's Law," requires no billboards, no TV, radio, newspaper nor magazine ads, no mass mailing campaign to millions of addresses. Read the proposal!

The neighbor dogs will die of simple old age, a slowly failing liver perhaps, with far less tragedy than the death of my dog. Had I received info early, she and I would have had 750 to 1,800 more days and nights together. We went on thousands of outings. Outings twice daily. You must read the attached document before responding. You have to get the entire picture.

Maybe you want to consider an ouster of Ms. Bobosky. However, that is not my objective. My objective is stated here and in the attachment. I am crushed that she has refused response after her initial response appeared so affirmative. We have a social duty to others to dispense valuable Keys of Knowledge that will prevent suffering and are conscience bound to do so and must not blithely assume "oh, everyone knows that" because fellow Texans, no! Everyone does not know! There's no one who knows everything, and many people with elite knowledge in some area are ignorant of more ordinary things! Many people with elite knowledge in some area are ignorant of more ordinary things: The veterinarian who euthanized Capa to spare her death by pulmonary failure, in a discussion weeks earlier, had no knowledge of the human tooth regeneration achieved in 2011 at Columbia University Dental Lab. There are things all of us want to know, if ONLY someone would inform us!

There is nothing besides my own demise that will prevent me from contacting anyone and everyone necessary, shaking this tree over a period of years if necessary, to see that improvement in public information takes place. Not all pet owners acquire a dog by way of a city shelter or private rescue group to guarantee spay in females. The last three dogs that resided here all came as obviously abandoned and the first two were males, one from a roadside rest stop east of Dallas. More details are in the document.

Good Samaritans don't exclude a significant group of Texans from having vital info for their pet's health. The story of the shepherd with one sheep missing out of 100 still applies; in this case, the percent is

The story of the shepherd with one sheep missing out of 100 still applies; in this case, the percent is nearer to 10% than to one. Rescuers recovering trapped victims at earthquake sites don't exclaim, "We saved most of them; now we can call the operation off!"

When I set out on this course I quickly found THLN and I thought "great; ideal start!" So the rest of you THLN officials are now apprised of this. If I wait for a Bobosky response, the pyramids will be gone. There is no need to reply by saying "look at all we've done," OK well and good---now comes the time to get something done about THIS! People can have a half dozen things on their plate and still advance all of them. There is no excusable basis to say "the press of other business prevents consideration of this item." I

There is no excusable basis to say "the press of other business prevents consideration of this item." I can message legislators as easy as anyone else can. Breast cancer is a huge concern among women, especially over age 50. Many women have companion pets. These pets are of extreme importance to them and this matter will not be trivialized, marginalized and absolutely not ignored nor refused cooperation. This current will flow regardless of anyone sitting on their hands. Will you please HELP?

I have no idea as whether Bobosky ran the proposed bill (see attachment) past anyone else in THLN; therefore, before dismissing THLN as hopeless, I concluded this message is necessary. More likely she didn't.

Including or course the entire human breast cancer network, their pets are VERY important to them and everyone will be contacted in due time. THLN now has a second chance to be the first group to take action. I await affirmative response, and will watch like a hawk to see if action is taken in Austin. I won't wait very long as other dogs are at risk of dying a horrible death because so many people only are aware of "spay to prevent overpopulation," that is not ENOUGH awareness! Many people are about taking pets for annual exam the same way they are about seeing a dentist---why go unless something is hurting? This mentality is out there and allows canine mammary cancer a head start. There are ways regardless of getting warnings out which must be implemented. Now, are you going to DO something, or will others get it done without THLN participation?

FYI my conclusions on THLN as messaged to some associates of mine!

What a laugh! Whitney Hanson of Spay Neuter Network from the standpoint of her involvement with THLN won't touch a legislative educational effort to inform Texas pet owners of no spay = mammary cancer risk and pyometra hazard! Spay Neuter Network says ---

"All of the services we offer are preventive and will keep your pets healthy."

<https://spayneuternet.org/services/spay-neuter-services/> ZERO specific warning on that page about mammary cancer and pyometra risk due to no early spay! Still DISREGARDING all the people whose pets were acquired outside a "mandatory spay to adopt" framework! Always someone could become informed if people raving about spay to prevent euthanasia of healthy dogs would just add a TINY amount of extra effort to mention mammary cancer and pyometra!

Then at <https://spayneuternet.org/info-fags/> they finally state--- (what if people don't see this page, and only see the other page?) ---

"In addition, early spaying prevents later problems, including mammary tumors, uterine infections, and uterine tumors. If a female is allowed to go through a heat before spaying, those problems may still arise later in life because estrogen is stored in the system as a result of the heat."

They were messaged as follows below. I can see no reason for me to continue contacting THLN as everyone is completely unresponsive. If I EVER discover THLN is opposing this initiative on a legislative level, I will take measures to see word gets around!

NOW! Outside of a legislative pursuit, if Whitney Hanson wanted to help which she has quite an organization she could designate several volunteers to message all the pet rescue and adoption groups across Texas, volunteers such as retired persons with time on their hands, to ask that everyone at their sites start featuring warnings about spay to prevent mammary tumors and pyometra. City run animal shelters too, everyone with offices should feature a sign warning about mammary cancer and pyometra. Had I been informed early I think my treasured dog Capa would still be with me. The system failed Capa and it failed me. This is a State approaching 30 million residents. Many people know nothing about spay besides "overpopulation." People who would appreciate getting an early warning are not being taken into consideration, especially when they acquired a pet outside a mandatory spay framework!

I am outraged that no telling how many other people are remaining uninformed as I was about a dog's ovaries becoming time bombs. I cringe thinking the cruel fate that is impending on many of their treasured pets. I wonder how can people representing themselves as concerned for pets be unwilling to take steps that could enable thousands of dogs dying from mammary cancer that invades their lungs.

Tethering/chaining is an external threat. Mammary cancer is a medical threat. Too many people don't know of any link between it and absence of early spay. You at THLN are actually willing to let a segment of Texans remain uninformed?

Can't you see this is a PROBLEM or am I butting my head against a STUMP? I am always open to a non-legislative improvement in the public information system as to important aspects of pet health. I have many other people to ask for help in this matter, now I turn to contact them if after one more week of wait THLN maintains an unresponsive stance.

I greatly streamlined the earlier pet proposal although I felt you'd have counter proposal if you cared to, which you didn't and additionally none of you "concerned pet lovers" had the decency to send any response, and all of you acted like a ridiculous phalanx and stuck together completely like soulless personnel on an automated BORG spaceship!

Now, what say any of you phalanx members about these items---

TX Humane Legislation Group Opposes Humane Legislation

“What’s in a name? The Texas Humane Legislation Network reveals not much, as an organization supposedly dedicated to “humane legislation” comes out in opposition to one of the most significant animal protection bills ever introduced in the state.”

As No Kill advocates rejoice and thousands upon thousands of animal lovers throughout Texas flood their legislators with calls of support for the Texas Companion Animal Protection Act which would ban the gas chamber, end convenience killing, mandate collaboration with rescue organizations, and much more, the THLN just released their statement of opposition because they were not consulted on the bill.

Calling for shelters to continue gassing animals, to continue killing in the face of a rescue alternative, and more, THLN’s position reveals sour grapes, stunning hubris, and a serious case of misplaced priorities.

and more, THLN's position reveals sour grapes, stunning hubris, and a serious case of misplaced priorities.

Above item appears to date to 2011 and regardless that Winograd should update it, it doesn't get any of you or previous officials of THLN excused from giving assent to letting pets in 29 to 30 city shelters continue to be gassed from the 2011 legislative bill defeat until January 1, 2014, when a statewide gassing ban went into effect. You also could have taken your PAC legislative fund and diverted it instead towards assisting gassing shelters to transit to less stressful typical veterinary injection euthanasia. Another Happy Hour to go to, huh?

WHAT GIVES THLN ANY RIGHT TO ACT LIKE A STATE LEGISLATIVE CARTEL REGARDING DOMESTIC PETS?

Texas Humane Legislative Network (THLN), (a lobbying organization whose board members include a director of a high kill shelter);

<https://ananimaladvocate.com/tag/no-kill-houston/>

The last time that the Houston "Humane" Society was somewhat transparent with their intake and outcome numbers, they reported killing more than 15,300 pets in one year. If the Houston Humane Society has been killing the same number of pets every year since that time, that means more than 237,000 pets have been killed by the Houston "Humane" Society, under Sherry Ferguson's direction.

one year. If the Houston Humane Society has been killing the same number of pets every year since that time, that means more than 237,000 pets have been killed by the Houston "Humane" Society under Sherry Ferguson's direction.

And if the Houston Humane Society has been killing the same number of pets since Sherry Ferguson was hired in 1984, they have killed more than 489,600 pets under her direction.

Let that sink in 489,600+ pets KILLED by the Houston "Humane" Society under Sherry Ferguson's direction.

Of course, that number could be much higher now.

Of course, that number could be much higher now.

For a humane organization to give an award to the person who has been responsible for that kind of mass killing of animals is truly mind boggling to me. Even though THLN fought against the Companion Animal Protection Act (a state law that would have saved thousands, if not millions, of Texas shelter pets every year), this macabre "award" still stuns me.

I expect positive action from THLN re my proposed state bill as much as I expect to be named Jeff Bezos beneficiary.

However, I have gained something by sending this; I have a computer record that I contacted THLN; that you disregarded the first version and will very likely trash the streamlined version as well. That sheepskin over your backs is becoming inadequate. Do you know what the phrase "bad public relations" means? In 48 hours your addresses go on my Blocked Senders roster.

As of late March 2019, I have not sent any more messages to this morally stale THLN excepting once to THLN chapter leaders on February 2, 2019, and not one of them responded either---
